
HideSettingsPages Crack +

HideSettingsPages is a straightforward and quick solution for configuring your pages' visibility in the Settings app from Windows. The program has a convenient GUI that allows performing fast setups and bulk modifications, with just a couple of clicks. The Windows Settings app and the Group Policy Editor After Microsoft released the Creators Update, back in 2017, Windows became a bit more versatile, allowing for additional customizations, including the new option called 'Settings Page Visibility.' Essentially, this feature enables the modification and configuration of a certain policy from your system located in the Local Group Policy Editor or in your Registry (a low-level database that stores basic functionality of your Windows OS). By accessing the 'Settings Page Visibility', you can configure your system to display only certain parts of the Settings app. This is helpful especially for users who share their computer with others or for sysadmins who need to preset a basic configuration on given PCs. One can conduct these arrangements and alter the Settings defaults manually or using apps like HideSettingsPages that help implement the desired changes faster. A super-convenient program with a comprehensive interface HideSettingsPages is an open-source project that allows customizing the Settings app superfast and regardless of your Windows 10 version (Pro or Home). It is a known issue that, for accessing your Local Group Policy Editor in Windows 10 Home, you need to priority add a GpEdit enabler. HideSettingsPages will ease your hassle and will seamlessly implement your desired settings. The semi-portable app has a function for checking the elements you want to hide (or show, if you have them all hidden) and altering the Registry key values in bulk. Moreover, this tool allows checking your existing configuration before changing anything, undo changes, import or export configurations, or display restore point reminders. How to download and install HideSettingsPages from Softonic: Click on the green Download button below and you will be redirected to the download page. Select one of the options and press the Download button. You can also access this download by selecting one of the links below. At the end of the download process you will receive a Setup.exe file. Run the installation file. If you are asked to activate the program, select the appropriate option (also available on the website above) and click on the activation button. HideSettingsPages will be activated and ready to use. Click on the Start Menu and Run button together to open
