Patients with heart failure are in general at increased risk of perioperative morbidity and mortality. The presence of heart failure increases the risk of postoperative complications that may have serious adverse consequences for the patient's health. 2. Heart failure is an independent risk factor for poor outcome in cardiac surgery. Patients with heart failure have a high risk of complications during and after cardiac surgery. 3. Patients with heart failure have low cardiac output and systemic congestion which may deteriorate during and after non-cardiac surgery. These patients may decompensate rapidly because of an increased cardiac demand and/or reduced cardiac reserve. 4. No controlled trials have been published on management of non-cardiac surgery in patients with heart failure. However, the majority of patients with heart failure are only slightly affected by symptoms and rarely are hospitalized for non-cardiac surgery. The decision to perform or not to perform non-cardiac surgery in patients with heart failure should take into account the medical history, patient characteristics, the severity of the heart failure and the type of non-cardiac surgery. In patients with a history of heart failure, atrial fibrillation or at

Jokes don't hurt, and the jokes are funny. Nobody will tell you that Albert Brooks couldn't have scripted the hell out of the Breaking Bad finale. I'm not saying that he did. I'm just saying that he could have. Such is the case with his 1998 film, Broadcast News, which not only managed to earn Brooks and Melissa Mathison an Oscar nomination for Best Original Screenplay but came to represent the pinnacle of the workplace comedy for a generation. Over the last fifteen years, both of Brooks' comedies, Think Like A Man and Rounders, have been hit or miss affairs; think like a man was sheer brilliance and Rounders was a charmless clunker. Now, at the end of the decade, Albert Brooks has returned to dazzle us with his genius for the first time in years. What gives? It seems like only yesterday that we were standing in line for oh, an hour to buy Rounders. It was pretty special for us to get tickets, even in the long run, and to an already packed capacity. The movie wasn't going to do much business, even with the star power of the likes of Robert De Niro and Morgan Freeman, not to mention the cast that might have included Ryan Phillippe. But that wasn't the point. It was about the folly of being a young upstart in a world where you weren't sure where the opportunities lay. We laughed 570a42141b
