What's New In?

Siddharta Brilliant Enlightenment screensaver show the Buddha statue and the halo on the halo. But the meaning of the halo is totally different. I have thought about this subject for a long time. According to the Sanskrit word "Halo" means: "The Mystic Circle". It is the small circle on the top of the Buddha's head. The Sanskrit word "Samvara" means "to remain" or "to remain being". So the meaning of the halo is: It is the circle on the top of the head, which represents the wisdom of the "remaining" and the "re-maining". When we are talking about "being or non-being", "good or bad", "becoming or not-becoming", there is no meaning at all. It is only when we are talking about "existence or non-existence", "I or non-I", "the true or false", "becoming or not-becoming" that there is some sense. There is no "being or non-being", "good or bad", "becoming or not-becoming" at all. When we are talking about "existence or non-existence", "I or non-I", "the true or false", "becoming or not-becoming" -- there is "good or bad" -- it is only when we are talking about "being or non-being", "good or bad", "becoming or not-becoming" that there is "good or bad". If we don't talk about "good or bad", "existence or non-existence", "I or non-I", "the true or false", "becoming or not-becoming", then there is no meaning. It is only because the mind is trying to be "I" that it can become "non-I". When the mind says "I am Buddha" it is actually only through the previous "I" that it can be called a Buddha. If the mind doesn't say "I", then what we can call it is the "enlightened or enlightened". Only "enlightened or enlightened" can be said to be Buddha. "I am Buddha" and "I" are not Buddha, they are only enlightenment. Buddha means "no-I". When you know "no-I" then you are called Buddha, and no-I is called Buddha. When you are talking about "I" then you are talking about "non-I". The Buddha statue and the halo are both Enlightened or Enlightened. The enlightenment which can only be seen in the halo, is the enlightenment of the "I" which has dropped all "I". That is what is called Buddha. But it is the enlightenment of the "I" which has dropped all "I". The enlightenment which can only be seen in the Buddha statue,
