collecting cases). This reasoning would not apply to a decision to impose a fine, however, which is within the discretion of a court. It is true that the Treasury Department

reviewing the legality of fines under the tax code (although it probably would not have to do so), see 54 Fed.Reg. 33873 (1989), but I know of no court that has held that it lacks the power to review such fines, and I do not think that it would. See, e.g., Chicoine v. Commissioner, 748 F.2d 147, 151-52 (3d Cir.1984); Thomas v. Commissioner, 792 F.2d 1256, 1262 (4th Cir.1986); Grossman v. Commissioner, 686 F.2d 295, 298 (8th Cir.1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1038 (1983); Scroggins v. United States, 184 Ct.Cl. 530, 541-43 (1968) 2 The duties of the District Directors include, inter alia, the collection of all taxes due, see 26 U.S.C. § 6331(a), and the settlement of disputes between taxpayers and the IRS regarding these taxes. The District Directors are authorized to issue rules and regulations, including penalties, for the administration of the internal revenue laws. 26 U.S.C. § 7805(a) 3 In this regard, a taxpayer may not protest, within the IRS, the amount of a tax assessment.

Notwithstanding the authority of the IRS to correct errors in the assessment of taxes before the IRS Commissioner approves the assessment, see 26 U.S.C. § 6203, the regulations make clear that the
