The human homologue of the mouse dihydrofolate reductase gene (dhfr-p) maps to chromosomal location 19q13.2. We have shown that dhfr-p is a nucleolar protein and that it has a regulatory role in rRNA processing. We have also reported on the identification of the human genes for two positive elongation factor (Pef and Eft), and the p16 tumor suppressor protein CDKI-1. We have also completed a comprehensive analysis of yeast genes that are involved in ribosome biogenesis and associated with the core and the NC. We have reported results regarding the role of ribosome biogenesis in cellular responses to oxidative stress and in the pathogenesis of a respiratory disease. We have also mapped the L1 (LINE-1) element from the human LINE-1 Repbase sequence and identified genes that may be activated by elements of this family. These genes are important in the pathogenesis of human disease. Of particular interest is the mitochondrial gene NADH dehydrogenase 1 beta (ND1-B). We have shown that this gene is damaged by a specific LINE-1 element (Alu-1-Pvu-2) in position 537 of the primary transcript of the gene. These results suggest that the ND1-B gene is a target of Alu elements. We have also shown that the effects of LINE-1 elements on the primary transcript of the ND1-B gene is caused by a cis-mut
