And it is not just their goon-filled uniforms that give it away. A news report states that the Rangers — a day after the Philadelphia Flyers lost to the Chicago Blackhawks — were in the locker room late Thursday night with several players decked out in full protective headgear, looking for a way to slow down the Winnipeg Jets. "The Jets are one of the fastest, most aggressive teams in the NHL," captain Mark Messier told reporters Friday. "It's something we've been working on, and we've got to start being more physical. When they get up their shots, we need to hit them. There were a few (hits), and a few not so good, but we need to be smart and not throw out our numbers. "This is a process. It's a learning curve, and we need to stay together and continue to stick to the process." "We were physical against the Flyers. We need to be better in the net. We need to be more physical. It was a real good team win. Obviously we need to be better, and we're going to 648931e174
