Flickr_URL Making Sense Of The New York Times Company After being briefed on the move, Mr. King said he understood why Mr. Patrick had been forced to break with the company. He said that one of the reasons he had issued his report earlier than expected was that he wanted to speak with Mr. Patrick to explain why he had been persuaded to break with the company. The other reason, Mr. King said, was that he wanted to give Mr. Patrick a chance to respond to allegations in the report. Finding a Successful Business After Mr. Patrick was fired, Mr. King found an opening. In the year since, his company, a Philadelphia-based research firm, has been doing a lot of business with Reuters. He said he expected that he would soon have a succession plan in place to run his own business when the time came. "Success is a matter of not always knowing where you're going," Mr. King said, "but never knowing where you are." John Richard.
